Davis Robson

Davis Robson is the son of Joe Robson, developer of Forest Ridge. As a child, he spent many hours out on the development and one of his favorite memories was riding around on all the machinery. At two years old he could've told you the names of all the equipment on any job site.

He graduated from OSU with a degree in management and a minor in marketing. Having been around the construction industry his whole life, it was a natural fit when he started his own remodeling company in 2014 specializing in flipping houses. Within two years, he grew the company from a one-man show to running three crews and managing multiple housing inventory. In 2016 he put his company aside when Joe requested his help to finish out the last few neighborhoods in Forest Ridge. He is currently responsible for all new developments and is working with Joe on future expansion plans for Forest Ridge.

He currently sits on the HBA Board of Directors and is the Secretary of the Broken Arrow Economic Development Corporation. Through these entities, he volunteers his time to help grow the home building industry and expand Broken Arrow through economic development.

In his spare time, Davis enjoys spending time with his two children Whitney and Axel, and playing all sports.

Terra Branson, Secretary of the Nation & Commerce, Muscogee (Creek) Nation

Terra Branson-Thomas is the Secretary of the Nation Commerce. Branson-Thomas has extensive experience in Indian policy and legislative history – particularly in the areas of Self-Governance and Self-Determination. She has a wealth of knowledge regarding tribal governments, non-profit organizations, federal grant writing and administration, strategic planning and program implementation. Her professional experiences include national tribal non-profit management, federal compacting and negotiations, federal and tribal legislative development, federal grant management and grassroots organizing. She has a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Native American Studies from Dartmouth College and a Masters of Public Policy from Georgetown University.

Jason Hudson, CEO, RL Hudson

Jason Hudson is CEO of RL Hudson & Company, which was founded in 1980 by Rick Hudson. The Company began as a distributor of rubber O-ring seals and primarily served Oklahoma's booming oil industry. RL Hudson recognized the growing demand for technically sophisticated plastic and rubber parts. In 2017, Jason lead a team to launch new in-house plastic injection molding and tooling manufacturing which is their fastest growing product line.
